Dr. Hu Shih Frowns Upon Titles of Your Excellency or Mr. Ambassador; Arts Club Interior Decorating Exhibit

By Robert Crawford.

The Chinese Ambassador in Washington prefers to be addressed as Dr. Hu Shih, instead of Your Excellency or Mr. Ambassador, being heard to remark on one occasion that he had almost degenerated into an ambassador. And yet there is no member of the diplomatic corps at the Capital who performs his official and social duties more punctiliously or graciously than this noted scholar, litterateur and lecturer. And while he smilingly says he has 17 honorary doctors' degrees, his dissertation on "The Development of Logical Method in Ancient China" won him the only doctor's degree he ever really worked for. This he received while doing post-graduate work under Dr. Johns Dewey at Columbia University.

When this is dispensed by Mrs. K. W. Yu, wife of the Embassy Secretary, who often acts as hostess for the Ambassador,

When Dr. Hu Shih is not feeding Oaks, or watching the squirrels, or studying the habits of the birds which abound there, for true relaxation he turns to his collection of match covers, which now has reached gigantic proportions, thanks to the hundreds of people and ad-mirers who have become interested

When it is possible he endeavors companying these gifts and now and then will send in return one of his own covers, marked with his and orchids.

Interesting Exhibit At Arts Club.

A most interesting exhibition of interior decorating at the Arts Club is receiving much attention owing to the historic interiors shown as well as modern styles and adaptations of the Colonial period. A wellknown designer of interior decorating, Miss Elaine Drake of New York, who has studied the art in Europe, is very happy in her selection of subects shown. A Chinese Chippendale dining room is charming in its restfulness . . . a Regency library . . . a French Victorian salon with a wall decoration of tiny roses is simply enchanting in its dainty loveliness . . . a stately Louis XV boudoir is attractive . . . a modern powder room with an original scheme of folding mirrors is unique and some old Pennsylvania Dutch interiors with the furnishings of an and Mr. Jack J. A book which is exciting much favorable comment is Emil Ludwig's "Mediterranean." The publishers say this is not a travel book, but a history in popular form of the Mediterranean area from the hoenicians up to the outbreak of present war. While this book not go on sale until in May the advance notices which come our writing table create a taste for more. Washingtonians who have met Dr. Ludwig have a genuine affection for him.

Trim, Slim, Almost Prim Coiffures for Wartime

Scolding locks, grandma called them, referred to the unkept effect achieved by escapist hair on the head of a lady who didn't care. Grandma would never have approved the fly-away long bobs popular in recent years. A lady, in her opinion, never appeared in public unless every hair was in place, the coiffure a master-piece of polished smoothness.

It's quite possible grandma had something there. At least the trend at the moment seems to be away from the flyaway and back to the smooth. These days ladies are busy—filling the gaps in offices and facand rising prices, working in canteens, for benefits, the Red Cross, bond-selling campo
